ROSWELL, Ga. — Several changes are coming to the Roswell Arts Fund, the city's partner organization that acts an advocate for the arts community.

Two new people have been appointed to the Board of Directors: Kent Knowles and Diane Peoples.

Knowles is a Foundation Studies Professor at SCAD-Atlanta, where he has learned the business and academic side of the arts. He is also a figurative painter.

Peoples currently works with Decisely Insurance Solutions LLC, a benefits brokerage and human resource services firm specializing in integrated technology solutions for small businesses. She brings decades of marketing experience and communication to the Roswell Arts Fund.

Additionally, two new staff members have been added to the Roswell Arts Fund.

Emma Chammah will take on a new role as the organization's first public art administrator. She holds a Masters of Architecture from Tulane University School of Architecture.

Chammah said she believes public art should be rooted in the community and integrated in the social and economic fabric.

Becky Peters Kiles was announced as the new Marketing & Outreach administrator. She started her career as an actor and graduated from Kennesaw State University. She later transitioned her skills to arts administration and brings experience working with several facets of the arts industry.

As part of the National Arts and Humanities month, held every October, the Roswell Arts Fund also recently announced a new membership program. Membership will include invitations to exclusive member events and artist talks, quarterly member-only updates and discounts to ticket events.

Higher level members will have the opportunity to attend the December 2018 Patron and Benefactor Reception, which will include a sneak peek at the sculptures selected for the fourth annual ArtAround Roswell 2019 Sculpture Tour.
